ALL INDIVIDUALS AND ORGANIZATIONS THAT SUPPORT AND VALUE HERITAGE AND HERITAGE ACTIVITIES IN THE EDMONTON REGION ARE INVITED TO BECOME MEMBERS OF THE EDMONTON HERITAGE COUNCIL.

Edmonton Heritage Council members are a diverse group of engaged citizens and heritage organizations including historical and genealogical societies, Aboriginal and cultural communities, family history groups, museums, archives and historic sites, and a whole range of heritage researchers, supporters and advocates from all walks of life.

By supporting the research, preservation, protection and presentation of heritage in our city and its communities, and by promoting an awareness of how this distinct place came into being, the Edmonton Heritage Council envisions heritage as a valued and integral part of life.

Our concept of heritage is wide-ranging and inclusive. In brief, it is our inheritance from the past, a past that informs our present and shapes our future. By delving into the riches of this personal and collective history, we can also ensure that Edmonton's present and future is honoured, preserved and shaped by a dynamic organization whose work will continue from generation to generation.

The Edmonton Heritage Council is committed to supporting the work of others, to stimulating partnerships, and to initiating projects that:

- provide a forum for analyzing, discussing and sharing heritage issues
- advocate for a vibrant heritage community and heritage programs
- unify Edmonton's heritage community and give it a voice
- promote the awareness and development of effective, informed and recognized heritage principles and practices.

Founded in 2009, the Edmonton Heritage Council is a not-for-profit society and has made an application for Canadian charitable status. The formation of the Council was a key recommendation of The Art of Living (www.edmontonheritage.ca/reports), Edmonton's ten-year cultural plan adopted in 2008 by City Council. The plan identified eleven heritage goals including important work involving museums, archives and their collections, the establishment of heritage awards and greater recognition for heritage advocacy, and the raising of public awareness of heritage issues.

The members of the Edmonton Heritage Council are the heart of the Council. They are populating the networks, animating the discussion, planning and developing programs and providing leadership, and they form the Board of Directors of this exciting organization.

Become a member by joining the Edmonton Heritage Council online at www.tixonthesquare.ca or by completing the accompanying membership form.
